

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

A DESERTER KILLED AND TWO OTHERS ARRESTED.—On the 16th, Captain McCormick's company of Bellman County (Ind.) Legion, assisted by the Windham Township, Knox county, company, under command of Lieut. Smith, made descent upon the premises of James Willis, a deserter from the 235 Indiana Volunteers, and in the attempt to capture him, shot and killed him. He was a desperado, man, having successfully resisted all attempts to capture him for two years. The Legion found him asleep in a stable, and called upon him to surrender. He jumped to his feet and commenced firing with his revolver, the bullet shot from it hitting an ugly, though not dangerous, spot in the shoulder of the Legionary and Schoolteacher.

THE ROMAN DISCOVERY.—The recently exhumed colossal bronze statue of young Hercules at Pompeii is undergoing a thorough process of cleaning. The metal is said to be saturated with damp in consequence of the great length of time it has been in the water. The Art Commissioners have valued the statue at 45,000 pounds—between $3,000 and $4,000. The following full account of his extraordinary discovery we clip from the London Athenaeum:

"Since I wrote to you last, telling of the discovery of the statue, I have seen several letters in the English newspapers from their 'own correspondents'; these letters are so desultory of truth in many respects, that I will only give you a few lines on the subject, which is daily increasing in interest. The statue has been got out of the hole and removed to one of the principal buildings of the town, the temple of the palace. It is still on its back, and a swarm of workmen, under the direction of Tenerani, are at work. They seem hovering over it like so many vultures, and are pulling at the head, water, others with clubs of iron and bronze, and the 'shank of hammers,' together with the pick-axe, in the labor of removing the statue, with such violence, that it produces an effect as popular as it is deplorable.

"In consequence of the removal of the statue, the hole in the ground has been filled up, and a guard of honor was placed over it, to prevent any one from touching it. The last expression of the principal inhabitants came to me this morning, when I called at the quarantine buildings, where I had taken up my quarters. After the inevitable delay, I sent him a letter, and asked him to come to me at the statue, and I told him that the Governor turned to me rather abruptly and asked if I was ready to go to the mosque. I told him that I was, and he said, 'Come with me.' I followed him to the mosque, and when he and his party of sappers, were not far from the mosque, he said, 'I have got one word about my own affairs.' My examination of the localities at Jerusalem was told him, and he said, 'I have been turned over to him by Captain H. B. York, Chief of Artillery of Post, who was temporarily placed in command till the arrival of Col. S. M. Leetman, R. G. Day, battery B, 1st V. A. A. is Adjutant.

"Almost every day we are hearing of degradation being committed on both sides of the river, by soldiers of either side, by robbers and law-breakers, commanded by a notorious rebel and rogue named 'Witherspoon.' On the 4th instant the 'Alabama Union Scouts' were fired upon by twenty or more of the rebels, when only about two miles from camp. Four of the scouts were dangerously, and, it is feared, mortally wounded, two of whom had their horses killed under them. The degradations of this gang are getting to be so frequent that some measure certainly ought to be taken to drive or capture them."

MORE MURDERS.—The Knoxville Whig of a late date says: "But a short time since, at Laurel Gap, between Hawkins and Greene counties, the rebels murdered in a most savage manner Jesus Maya, Henry Yakey, Samson Estop, Pleasant Morris, and a Mr. Early—five in all. These same men were murdered by a portion of Vaughn's command. John Rogers commanded the squad. These brutal murders were perpetrated by Thomas Rogers, Abrahams, Lorenzo Porter, and a thief by the name of Smith. All this was the work of one neighborhood and of one day. Similar murders are going on in every neighborhood through which Vaughn's robbers pass."

General Weitzel, who commanded our land forces in the former assault on Fort Fisher, was married in Cincinnati to a Miss Boggs on the last Thursday, the 12th inst.

A Correspondent of the New York Tribune says there are already five colored regiments in Richmond, under the new rebel regiments of arming the slaves.

BOUNTY COURT ISSUE.—We clip the following from the Paris (Ky.) Citizen of Friday:

"Jesus with thirty-four of his men passed over the lake at the second toll-gate, between here and Miami, on the 25th, morning, 'paying the oarsmen, horse, &c.' They were going in the direction of Flat Rock.

"We learn that on last Monday night a party of guerrillas, some twenty-four or thirty, made their appearance at the toll-gate, between here and Miami, and robbed Mr. Conaway's store, about $1,000 worth of dry goods, and carried off a number of horses, having loaded them with the plunder, and left them, and led them off in an easterly direction.

On Tuesday night nine guerrillas dashed into Mansfield, and took Mr. F. E. Congleton's store, about $1,000 worth of goods, and learned from a reliable source that equads of from ten to fifteen of these marauders pass through Mansfield's mills next evening.

Our Correspondent says they are very much annoyed by guerrillas or thieves. Secretly a night passes without one or more of our friends in the country, being relieved of either money or property, or both, &c. &c. On the night of last week, Mr. Warren, the toll-gate keeper to the North Middleton toll-pike, near the city, was robbed of some six thousand dollars. On the 21st, he was again robbed of $1,000, when he went to the house of Mr. John Pierce near Clintonville, arrested Mr. Pierce and two negroes, and took them to Mr. H. T. Dinsmore, when, there, the negroes were set free, and put them under the ice, in a pond. Mr. Pierce made his escape, and we have learned that he was captured, and is now in the hands of the police, but the thing looks bad.

The first claim of the court-on-arriving is certainly discreditable. It is surrounded on all sides by the most palpable lies, and of course in the case below the floor. The architectural ornament, and without even a respectable modelling; externally there are stones, but internally the walls and roofs are plastered over.

In two very small chambers in these buildings are placed the catafalques of—of course in the case below the floor. The architectural ornament, and without even a respectable modelling; externally there are stones, but internally the walls and roofs are plastered over.

Having satisfied myself regarding these, I at last crossed the threshold of the church, and entered a school house its bounds as I passed, and if I did not check them at least gauged them, and found them to be about eight.

At the outer door of the mosque I was received by the chief mullah and all the officials of the sanctuary. On my way up the stairs they were all in their places, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, while I walked between them, recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.

It is evident that they may be, and are generally, done so hasty that no one is decided except very short-sighted people. But the character of the intention is not equal to the skill of the execution, and the result is often a failure.

On the 21st, I was received by the chief mullah, and the muezzin, who is the principal imam, who recited the call to prayer, and the crowd bringing up the rear.